

Lavender

Lavandula angustifolia

Lavandula officinalis

Lamiaceae (the mint family)

A detailed botanical illustration of a lavender plant, showing green, silvery-green leaves and clusters of small purple buds on slender stems. The illustration is positioned in the top-left and bottom-right corners of the page, framing the central text.

LAVENDER

Lavandula angustifolia

Properties

- Calms the spirit (gentle nervine)
- Freshens the air (aromatic)
- Soothes minor skin redness (anti-inflammatory)

Preparation

Tea — steep dried lavender buds in hot water 5 minutes; cool before sipping.

Sachet — fill a muslin bag with dried buds; tuck under a pillow.

Identify by

- Tiny purple-blue buds along tall slender spikes.
- Narrow silvery-green leaves.
- Strong sweet scent when you crush a bud.

Caution

Lavender is in the mint family. Test on the arm first for skin sensitivity. Food-grade buds only.
